CROWN Act Prohibits Race-Based Hair Discrimination in Employment and Educational Opportunities

What's New: Louisiana Governor John Bel Edwards signed the CROWN Act into law on June 21, 2022.

Why it Matters: The CROWN Act stands for “Creating a Respectful and Open World for Natural Hair”. The law prohibits race-based hair discrimination. Specifically, the act protects a person from being denied employment and educational opportunities because of their hair texture.

A national legislative effort began in 2019 as a collaboration between the soap maker Dove and three nonprofits: the National Urban League, Color Of Change, and Western Center on Law and Poverty. Currently, 16 states have passed a version of the CROWN Act providing protections for cultural and ethnic hairstyles for their citizens.

What This Means for Louisiana Employers: Employers should be prepared to incorporate the CROWN Act's protections into their discrimination policies. As an example, an employer's discrimination policy can contain the following language as a means of integrating the Act:

“The following protected class(es) is/are considered integrated, to the extent they are not already listed, into the Equal Employment Opportunity Policy of the handbook: hairstyle, which is defined as any characteristic, texture, form, or manner of wearing an individual's hair if such characteristic, texture, form or manner is commonly associated with a particular race, national origin, gender, gender identity or expression, sexual orientation, or religion.”
